SUSPICIOUS ACTIVITY REPORTING

Information for Officers Reporting on Suspicious Activity

When completing a suspicious activity report (SAR), officers must follow appropriate laws, regulations, and policies, paying close attention to the following:

- 1. The information for the SAR must be legally obtained.
- 2. The information submitted must be relevant to the identification of the subject or the subject's criminal conduct or activity.
- The information gathered cannot be based solely on the political, religious, or social views, associations, or activities of any individual or any group.

Race, ethnicity, gender, national origin, religion, sexual orientation, or gender identity must not be considered as factors creating suspicion (but attributes may be documented in specific suspect descriptions for identification purposes).

What if I am dispatched to a call for police service and then once on scene discover SAR-related activity?

Handle the call as usual, including all reports that your agency requires. If you observe SAR activity not directly related to a reportable crime, please complete a separate report with the SAR information.

What information should I include when documenting a suspicious activity? "Everything you can!"

It is important to include all information obtained so that the full context of the incident is apparent to anyone who reviews the report. This includes detailed descriptions of people, vehicles, facilities, etc. It is also important to include a complainant's information (name, phone number, etc.) if available.

The Nationwide SAR Initiative (NSI) is a partnership of agencies at all levels that provides law enforcement with another tool to combat crime and terrorism. The NSI has established a national capacity for gathering, documenting, processing, analyzing, and sharing SARs.

A suspicious activity report (SAR) is used to document any reported or observed activity or any criminal act or attempted criminal act that an officer believes may reveal a nexus to foreign or domestic terrorism. The information reported in a SAR may be the result of observations or investigations by police officers or may be reported to them by private parties.

Potential Criminal or Non-Criminal Activities Requiring Additional Information During the Investigation or Fact Gathering Note: When the behavior does not involve inherently criminal behavior and may involve constitutionally protected activity, the law enforcement agency will carefully assess the information and gather as much information as possible (including additional facts or circumstances indicating that the behavior is suspicious), before taking any action. The agency will then document and validate the information as being reasonably indicative of pre-operational planning associated with terrorism or other criminal activity and share it with other law enforcement agencies in accordance with applicable laws, regulations, and policies.
